Anthony says

I work in hospitality industry used to know a GM who was a department head of a Ritz-Carlton. He was the one who got me interested in the brand, and then I read and watched anything I could find about Horst Schulze and his story.

This book summarizes all what he said in his speeches on youtube, which I still recommend to watch as no book can show the level of passion and commitment this man has for creating excellent service.

The beautiful thing about his philosophy is that it neatly combines various business theories, psychology and produces something that really works.

Key points:

- People don't come to work for money. We seek purpose and relationships.
 - Key measurements. Guest satisfaction, employee satisfaction, lead indicators (sales)
 - Who are our customers? What do they want? How can we serve them better than competition?
 - Customers look for the following in any product or service: no defects, timeliness, friendly people
 - Personalize service. Adjust to the needs of each client
 - All problems come down to interactions with guests
 - Service: warm welcome, comply with guest wishes, warm farewell
 - Objective of a business: 1. Keep the customer. 2. Get new customers. 3. Encourage the customers to spend as much as possible!—but without sabotaging Objective Number One. 4. In all of the above, keep working toward more and more efficiency.
 - Make no excuses. Anything can be done
 - If you have a complaint. Own it immediately
 - Defect prevention is key to service excellence
 - CARE. Clean and repair everything
 - motivator in our lives isn't money; it's the opportunity to learn, grow in responsibilities, contribute to others, and be recognized for achievements.
 - management is caring for people
 - My point is, leaders are dreamers. They set their sights on worthwhile goals that will be good not only for themselves but also for their
 - Leadership implies that somebody has a destination in view and is taking people along to that destination.
 - Belief systems work. Culture works. The slogan or statement must be simply an interpretation of the real meaning and life within an organization.
 - “You won't accomplish what you don't measure.”
 - Do with excellence what the customer loves, and the money will follow.
 - There is always room at the top.
