Jenna says

Wish we had previously seen a few more instances of Ingrid getting under everyone's skin, but I do admit it's wonderful to see her mural with its strategically placed Post-it notes.

The drawing style when the characters are irate is...not that flattering, but I do enjoy Daisy's exaggerated expressions.

Elizabeth (Miss Eliza) says

Ah, how well I remember the whole, can't tell your friend how annoying their "better half" is drama of college. Le sigh. Hopefully Susan and McGraw get truly back together and don't break apart.

Lesbians are not a surprise to my parents. When I was 12 I covered every piece of walls and ceilings in my bedroom with pictures of Anastacia. I was obsessed with her aggressive American singing style and iron stomach. Maybe I still am...

Now Ingrid is REALLY getting on my nerves.

Sierra the Nerdgirl says

I am so here for the drama about to happen.

Briana says

This is my hating book. It's a ghostbusters-style containment unit for my rage. This marks Ingrid's 250th household transgression.

I found the teaspoons.

Those continentals and their yogurt, we should have known. 251-260.

Not much I have to say on this one, though the ending does make me wonder.....

Kristan says

I got behind on these issues and I've just missed these characters so much. It just keeps getting better and better.

Kait says

Just about everything in this book is totally believable to the college experience. Even Esther's over-the-top personality was totally on point to real life this issue. I'm heartbroken about some of the events, but that just brings more depth to this series.

Piper says

Really happy for Susan!
But I really can't stand Ingrid

Tiana says

...JOHN ALLISON HOW DARE YOU HURT ME LIKE THIS

~~Meg~~ says

Still one of my all time favorite comic series!

Morgan says

Another great issue.
