"I was a bag of bones. I still had skin and hair and probably pumping blood, but for all intents and purposes, I was cadaverous."

Being at the center of the were world's biggest conflict has finally landed March Howe in the ultimate mortal peril for a wolf: the middle of a cat lair. Surrounded by silver, she finds herself trapped by more than just the room she's confined to. Endless thoughts and questions envelop her and the promise of death approaches like a boundless and heavy storm cloud.

Unaware that it was the cats, the pack races across the state, in search of the wolves they think have March. Meanwhile, Avery is assembling a diverse group of weres to aid in the invasion and to rescue the girl he swore to protect. And while March's human friends may not know her secret, Ruthie Birch does. Enlisting the help of an ally unwelcome by the others, Ruthie devises a plan to join Avery's army, whether he likes it or not. And Saffron Kellum is forced to leave her comfort zone when her twin brother goes missing and she discovers she's the only one who can find him.

In Book Five of the Lone March Series, March Howe finds herself in an existential crisis that can only be soothed by the goddess she's estranged herself from. While the cats make beastly plans for the last female were-wolf, her family and friends make plans of their own that involve uncovering secrets and even double-crossing each other to save the last she-wolf. Will this contrasting group be able to work together to save March, or will the last of the were-wolves lose everything when their old enemy threatens to destroy the only hope they have?

From Reader Review Moon-Tide for online ebook

Ashley says

Love love love this book, very sad though too. This book is so much more different than the rest, i love it, even if there really isn't much romance for march in this, it is good. would loved to have jasper in it more but oh well, still loved it :)

Donna Langley says

:-)

Avery didn't make it!! I'm sad and sad for his son! Now I know why he was so guilt ridden and taking care of March!! But I hope they escaped the cats by now! Guess we'll find out soon enough

---

Katie says

I was almost done with it like ten pages left and I was like oh yay it's going to end on a somewhat happy note...just kidding you stupid fuck...death

Tabatha says

All I can say is... WHY??

Katie says

Makes you want to crawl into the action with them! Loved! Cliffhanger, like all the books in the series so far but sucks you right in again!

Hrtnsoul28 says

I do not have any words for this book. I have been trying to think of what to say for two hours now. All my mind keeps saying is OMG, OMG, and OMG. Can't believe I am saying this but I want winter to come soon so I can read the next book. Now I must go wipe my tears again.

Jennifer Humes says

I'm a total fan girl when it comes to these books!! First I love March and Avery's bond which yes it made me cry at the end.. I like how they all came together to save her..

---

Jennifer says

I liked it but I didn't like how it jumped from person to person seemed a little scrambled

---

heidi says

wow loved it. most of the book had me on the tip of my seat
