Description: Not many people in their small town are likely to understand how a widower can be with the man who accidentally killed his wife. Good thing what Jay wants—and deserves—is all that matters to Lincoln. Despite all the threats and anger and gunshots aimed at them over the past few months, they are determined to continue exploring the undeniable passion between them and build a new life together. Jay and Lincoln's happily-ever-after is showcased in this epilogue to the best-selling novel Breathe.

Barb ~rede-2-read~ says

This short story is not a stand-alone; it is intended as the Epilogue to Breathe, published in 2010. We get to revisit Jay and Linc who have just moved into a new house, one they are renting and planning to buy someday together. The author made a few references to the previous story, enough to jog my memory, but not a lot, so don't read this if you haven't read Breathe. If you have read Breathe, this is a must read and it would be good to do so before you start this. It's quite short, and covers about 24 hours in their lives--enough time to christen their kitchen table, and not with food!

There is a short segment in which we hear Jay's thoughts about the future, a future that is filled with possibilities, including the purchase of the house with Linc, complete with porch swing to allow them a private area for quiet reflection at the end of the day. Jay is back in college, Linc is working full time, and their lives are filled with hope.

On the second day of the story, we visit Linc's sister Nancy and her kids who have recovered from the fire and are moving into a new home. There's hope for a happy future for them as well.

As the story ends, Linc reflects on his appreciation of the gifts he's been given. All in all it's a nice satisfying story that serves to wrap up the ending of Breathe with a very special bow.

Note: This book was provided to me by the publisher through Hearts on Fire Reviews in exchange for an impartial review.

Bev says

Just a short novella letting us know how Lincoln and Jay are doing, and how they're moving forward with their lives....oh, and christening all the furniture and rooms in the house at the same time. Enjoyed it.

Candice says

Great follow up and look into the future of Lincoln and Jay.

Donna says

It was hard to rate this as it was so short and basically two short scenes... but it was great to have a peek at the happiness that Jay and Lincoln have managed to find now that everything has settled down... and it was great to see that Nancy and the kids were moving past the tragedy and beginning to make a new life for themselves and maybe a new man in her life! As hard as it is to believe after something this traumatic happens, life does go on and we must always look ahead and try to never look back to the time or event we thought there was no recovering from... we must dig deep into our inner strength and stand strong... believing that there is always hope!

This is exactly what Sloan Parker says it is - an epilogue to Breathe. So it is short. It's lovely to see Linc and Jay making a go of their lives, and that they're happy - that they can finally breathe. It's also nice to see Nancy and her kids moving on with their lives, too. Some sex and just generally catching up with two lovely characters from one of my favourite books Breathe

A short, lovely and sweet epilogue to Breathe, one of my favorite books
https://www.goodreads.com/review/show... . I loved seeing Jay & Linc happy together and that Linc's sister, Nancy is also getting her life together.

Linc & Jay are such a beautiful couple...absolutely adored them. Hopefully we see them again!!!

Thanks to the author for the free read!!!

Tina says

Thank you for that short epilogue of Breathe. It was awesome to see Linc and Jay together, building their future. I would love to see these guys again. What a nice enjoyable surprise...

Mark says

Sweet short epilogue to round of the main book. Never understand why these things can't be included in the original book.

Jenn C says

Nice short follow up to Breathe. I would love to see more of these two characters but I suppose the mystery has been solved.

So excited that we got this short epilogue to Breathe. Lincoln and Jay are together and happy, they have a future and are working their butts off to succeed, loved them. Yeah, yeah I wanted more, I always do.

Macky says

A lovely follow up buddy read with Mark, Tina, Gina and Bev. In this we get to see a little interlude or slice of life after the explosive events of Breathe have ended and the guys have finally moved in together. Short and very sweet and just as sexy as you'd expect from Lincoln and Jay. Bite size but I loved it. I love Hesse guys. * sigh*

Ami says

I am sure this story will have more impact if I can actually remember who these characters are head desk. It's not the story's fault of course. I have small memory capacity (cannot remember ALL stories I've read) and I read Breathe in November 2010. And I don't really do re-read. Don't expect me to remember much lol. But for a snippet, it's lovely.
