Pan says

The very last story in this book is my favourite. Ice cream and two paramedics :-)

First, can I just say that I am thrilled beyond words by the inclusion of my story “Pictures Of Lilly” in the latest, 2011, volume of Women’s Best Erotica? Edited by Violet Blue, it includes the expected round-up of the finest female erotica writers around...

One of whom is me!

The story of four teenaged girls who find their way, week after week, into the confines of a rather “exclusive” movie house, “Pictures Of Lilly” is also a slice of personal autobiography about that moment when fantasy and longing is suddenly confronted with the reality of a sex act that I’d been dreaming about since I first heard about it. Shot through with my love for what I believe remains the greatest porn film ever made, the immortal Sexorcist Devils.

Eighteen stories pack this book to bursting, eighteen authors with some amazing tales to tell. You can buy your copy from all the usual places... Amazon among them, of course... and... did I mention that I’m thrilled beyond words?

The collection begins strong, with the best pieces opening the anthology, but has an unsatisfactory filling. The level of interest and quality of writing picks up again towards the end. Probably the most unexpected story is the one with fantastical elements--not far enough out there not to find its place in this collection, but unusual enough to be a bright spot among too many tales of spanking.

Overall, I think best women's erotica 2011 was good. There is a reason why the book is titled: Best Women's Erotica. It even has variety. A veritable cornucopia of well-written stories encompasses this book and I think any reader would find a story that he or she would enjoy. Whether you like vanilla sex or something a little kinkier, you should find something. The story that tickles my fancy in particular is: I WISH YOUR BRAILLE by Louise Lagris.

Can't go wrong with Woman's Best. Have been reading these compilations since 2008 and will continue to do so. Nice variety of quick reads that are sure to hit the spot at least once.
