Adopted: Outback Baby Barbara Hannay

Nell Ruthven thought she'd missed her chance to be a mom when, at age nineteen, she was forced to give up her baby for adoption. Now Nell's discovered she has a tiny grandson in need of care. And her teenage sweetheart, cattleman Jacob Tucker, is in town....

At thirty-nine, this couple never thought they'd be parents, let alone grandparents! They never even thought they'd see each other again. But taking care of baby Sam gives them a second chance--maybe even a second chance to fall in love....

Christine (KizzieReads) says

It was a good read. A little bit rushed, but a nice, quick read. I think the characters could have been a bit more well rounded, but the book was too short for that. If you need a nice, feel good story, this is it.

Jennifer Susan Antony says

20 years after they meet up again as an grandparents!! Emotional conflict since beginning of the book.

happy sigh That hit the spot. (That would be the warm-fuzzies, bundle-of-joy spot...)

Casey Leigh says

Sweetly touching and emotionally evocative.
I shed a few tears throughout this book.
Enjoy this emotive tale of love found, lost and rekindled.

Linda says

I suspected when I started reading this book that I had already read it about 3 years ago, and I was right. But it's a good story, and worth a second read. I enjoyed it.
