Love Begins with Fate Lindsey Owens

Fate has a strange way of making things work. Kelsey's parents are divorced. She and her twin brother were separated. Now, half way through her senior year her mother and father have convinced her to go live with her brother and father for the rest of her senior year. Her best friend Hannah, begs her friend to go out for a night of fun before she starts her first day at the new school.

Giving in to her friend's whims for the first time in her life, she becomes someone she's not. Too drunk and too full of life, Kelsey does the unthinkable and dances for a guy. She didn't remember what happened at first but now she just hopes he can forget about her....

But boy was she wrong.

This was a weird read. The story felt disconnected, the characters lacked interest (they managed to be childish and know it alls and of course we had our man-ho and virgin to deal with) and I could never get involved with what was going on.

It has taken me several days to finish it and I have to admit that I was only able to finish it because I jumped some parts of it. There were several wtf moments and a whole undercurrent that kept on bothering me, but didn't totally understand until I finally read this paragraph from the book:

Parker had taken well to the position of " man of the house" and had become the true rancher which Kelsey needed in her life. He had been the strong and dominant figure that she couldn't be and she had become the loving and caring person which Parker wanted in a woman .

As a woman, I felt appalled after reading this, but I guess the were hints all around the book...

Yeah, this novel was weird and while there was little to no grammatical errors, I could help but think that the story should of been edited differently, so it made more sense. 1.5 stars.
