Silverana says

*small spoiler* I really like the Colby Agency series and this was turning out ok except near the end. After Kelly finds out that Trent has lied about his identity, she easily accepts his 5 second description of his next identity. She doesn't ask for any proof, just goes along with it 100%. After finding out that a person you are trusting has lied wouldn't you want to make sure the next description is what he/she says it is? The other part was that near the end, one of the terms Kelly uses to describe herself was a little unexpected. And there was a certain intimate part that I found weird in a Harlequin Intrigue book. Also, both the H and h act TSTL. The H decides to meet up with an agent despite knowing that he could not be on the good side. The h goes online twice despite the H having told her the first time that she could be tracked that way. The last few pages of the book kept making me think that this wasn't a Debra Webbs type of writing.

Amber says

I have to admit, I was kind of hoping for a particular villain. However I was still happy with the story resolution.
