[Siren Everlasting Classic ManLove: Erotic Alternative Sci-Fi Romance, M/M, HEA]

His life would never be the same...

Honor Vengeance took on the task of hunting down the illegally enslaved Earthlings because of his firm conviction he would never fall victim to their unique charms. But his mission brings him into repeated contact with humans, and his resistance quickly fades. Worse, there's one in particular he hungers for.

Carver Tam is on the verge of playing pro football when he's abducted and sold. Furious that he's lost everything he's worked so hard for, he's not about to surrender to his new master. When he ends up on a world where slaves are worked to death, he has no choice but to lead a rebellion. The last thing he was ever expecting was to be forcibly rescued by an eight-foot-tall, maroon-colored alien officer named Honor Vengeance.

Their attraction is instant and irresistible, but causes devastating consequences. Will their relationship be the last straw that forces the Krase government to cease their mission to rescue the illegally enslaved Earthlings?

We do get quite a bit of recapping and exposition in the first chapter. That's to be expected, I suppose, in case someone either picks this volume up as their first or spaces them out so long that some aspects might have been forgotten.

Sadly this chunk of exposition is also repetitive as hell within itself.

Still, it's nice that Honor's already been thoroughly softened up by all that went before. This is apparent immediately by his attitude towards humans as "living, breathing, feeling creatures", despite the fact that slaves in his world appear to be considered disposable.

I wonder if this specific theme of falling in love with someone before meeting them is like an extrapolation of love at first sight. I mean for those who have gotten so used to that idea that it's not special anymore and who want an even higher degree of instantaneousness than "immediately". Retroactive! XD

However, this causes the basis for attachment in this volume to be ludicrously flimsy, even more so than it was in the previous ones.

(view spoiler)

Bad enough that the emotional development of the relationship is hurried – even more so on Carver's side, since at least Honor had time to obsess before they met – but the ending is where things truly become rushed. I find it... weak.

So, overall, this wasn't too awful a book in the context of the series, but certainly far from one of the better ones.

And because I can, here's a mild irritation.

Carver was much bigger than Fraunnon, so he would make a terrible submissive sexual slave.

Blah, blah, blah. Size has nothing to do with submission.

Finally, in the eighth book of this partly humorous, partly fascinating series about cross-cultural love affairs, we get the story of Honor Vengeance. He's been a bit of a bad guy in previous volumes, or, shall we say, a Krase who took his duty far too seriously and wasn't willing to make allowances for feelings, and certainly not for those involving the newly discovered species of humans. Once I got to know him better in this book, I have to say, he more than redeemed himself and actually really grew on me!

Honor is as Krase as they come. Duty first, forget any sort of compassion or understanding, and as for love? Forget it. But then he starts meeting humans. First, he holds them in contempt, then he is very hostile, and finally, he begins to want one for himself. Not until he is open to the possibility does he even find one he's truly interested in. And when he does? Even though he thinks he's prepared, the roller coaster of emotions still takes him by surprise. Not that he is easily deterred, and that is a good thing!

Carver is a football player about to go professional when a gas explosion changes his life and he ends up abducted and sold into slavery on Krase. He is not one to give up, and even though his new life is nothing like his life on Earth, he adapts. He even leads his co-slaves into a revolt. Seeing Honor and wanting him are the same thing, and from then on, Carver is determined to make things work between them. In typical human fashion he uses logic only sporadically, mostly going on gut instinct. And when he ends up having to confront a ship full of Krase warriors to save a fellow human, he doesn't hesitate to do whatever it takes. As for him teaching the Krase to play football? Priceless!

If you like two strong, determined men coming together driven by lust, and expecting that one of them will have to submit, only to find it is much more fun to be versatile, if you enjoy reading about different cultural beliefs that collide, and if you're looking for another hot read in this very entertaining series, then you will most probably like this book.

Good book. Pretty standard for this series. Not the best in the series not the worst. It was nice to finally see Honor Vengeance get his human love story and happy ending.

The book actually clued us into the fact that there are at least four more books coming! :-) Id also like to see the surly Cursed Joy get his happy ending and im sure that will happen.

Im happy to see that the author didnt rely on the "hey u cant go back to earth...sorry abt that" for the only conflict in the story which happened in a couple of the previous installments.

Finally, Honor got his HEA! I'm glad he got someone who is similar to his body type and personality, not a dainty, distressed, effeminate mate. Not that I have anything against the type, but I think Honor's personality was suited with Carver. I expected there would be much more happening near the end but it just ended blandly. Still, I enjoyed reading this.

I'm looking forward to what will happen with Acerith and Jeremy. And of course, if Cursed Joy will change his opinion about humans later :D.

Vengeance was a big teddy bear under all that grumpy demandor. He had an annoying habit of assuming things thought. What was nice, Carver wasn't some damsel in distress. He took care of problems on his own and didn't wait for other to come and save him.
