Susan says

Another great read, very entertaining, can't wait for the next one.

LaShawnda Brown says

As usually this was a good read I love hearing about the trouble Donna seems to get herself into. I can't wait until May for the next book in the series. Keep writing this series after a long day at work it's be able laugh a lot at the end of the day.

Renee says

I had my doubts when I read the description, but I absolutely love this series!

Dee Haddrill says

I really do love this series! With her reason for being assassin no longer applying, Donna has decided that it's time to retire. At no surprise to any of us, this turns out to not be the best idea. Great characters, funny dialogue and a sweet romance, reading about Donna, Jack and the family feels like coming home.

Donna says

I love it

This is my favorite story so far, each book just keeps getting better. The Housewife Assassin's Hostage Hosting Tips has the 3 categories I require to make a good book, riveting, funny and heart warming. I stayed up way past my bedtime to finish this book. I'm looking forward to reading the next adventures of Donna, Jack and the rest of the gang.

Tracey says

I discovered this series on Kindle one night when I couldn't sleep. They are entertaining and easy reads. Almost entirely implausible, but what if the stay-at-home mom next door was a deadly assassin?

Korey says

Mary Mary

TOO CONTRARY!

That girl made me want to take her over my knee. That said, Josie Brown writes wonderfully realistic characters.

Jenna says

I really want to punch Penelope Bing repeatedly!

Karen Devine says

Alas we cut to the chase, family!

Whether catching the bad guys or saving the world from them, this cast of characters really believes in their families first above all else!

Angela Mcpherson green says

Love this series, so funny and entertaining!

Patricia Mccammon says

Great

Another hilarious story, but mixed with some sadness because sometimes the good guys don't always make it. But the bad guys always lose.

Barbara Hackel says

The plot of this book includes Donna multitasking as she plans a prom for Jeff's class and fights off Quorum, terrorism, keeps the President safe and interviews replacements for her position at Acme as she seriously decides to resign from her job. In the course of interviewing applicants, bizarre incidents keep interfering with the candidates and Donna, as one by one they meet untimely and unusual deaths. Eventually a former partner of Jack's comes out of retirement and joins the mission to keep the President safe. By a fluke, the President and terrorists are in the same hotel as the Prom that Donna has been forced into planning. When the two accidentally overlap, the results are deadly. I have never felt so panicked or nervous about Donna and Jack being to save their son from being beheaded by terrorists in that same hotel. While I enjoy Ms Brown's writing style and the capable characteristics she has given Donna and the other Acme agents, this time I could hardly bear to read what happen.

Superb writing and story lines are in all the books of the series. Be sure to read them in order (book one is free on Kindle at this time) and don't skip any. Everything makes so much more sense if you do! A fun series with enough action to wear me out!

Linda Quick says

Fantastic!!!!

Another winner in the Housewife Assassin series. In this book, Donna retires to focus on her family. This creates inner turmoil as she must cope with being suddenly closed out of Acme intelligence, and ,as a byproduct, unable to communicate with Jack. This becomes a serious problem when terrorists attack.

As always, the author begins each chapter with "tips" - in this book they focus on party hosting tips. They are guaranteed to make you laugh out loud or get arrested (should you choose to follow them).

This is a must read book.

Kimberly says

In this ninth book of the series, Josie Brown does not disappoint. Each book in the series gets better and better, and this one is a nail biter that keeps you on the edge of your seat.

Can Donna make the transition from assassin and honey pot back to the life of a normal, everyday housewife, without killing the mailman for being half hour late with the mail? Donna volunteers to head the Committee for her son's prom. With her skills, it should be "Eazy peasy!" until she winds up neck deep in Acme's latest international terror thwart!

A page turner with twists and turns right to the very end!

Pontiki says

Some parts of this book are really a 5, but others, 2, so this is a middle ground. Donna has decided to retire, but is to hire her replacement. It's kind of funny that each of three vying for the job end up getting killed by some weird accident, but what I didn't like was how obvious it was that Donna didn't want to retire in the first place.

Instead, she became more of a snoop with Jack and the team, and took on a ludicrous first dance for Jeff's class. All the problems Penelope causes make no sense, but of course, the hotel they have the dance at becomes handy later on.

The last third of the book is much better, with Donna involved in saving the president, a fun frenzy with the dance for the kids, and a certain return to sleuthing with Jack.

The death of Jack's new partner, Mara, out of retirement to help on the case, was very sad. The new baby, Nicky, for Emma and Arnie, is cute, and their wedding, a nice ending to this book.
