Old hatreds, dark suspicions, and deadly machinations are the order of the day.

When fate delivers Tyrion Lannister to Lady Catelyn Stark, she will have her revenge upon him for the attempted murder of her son Brandon-whatever the consequences. Meanwhile, in King's Landing, Sansa Stark, surrounded by enemies, finds an unlikely friend: the brutish, horribly disfigured knight Sandor Clegane. And as a murderous conspiracy unfolds behind the colorful pageantry of a royal tourney, Lord Eddard Stark will be approached by a mysterious new ally in his quest to solve the riddle of Jon Arryn's death.

Still good the story his more and more intriguing, still not a big fan of the drawing but maybe it is just a difference of style, i'm no expert, they look good but i just couldn't find them amazing! Worth the time tough!

A bit of back story in this comic, something missing greatly in the comics so far, and the tournament, while brief, was nice and added some much needed action as well. Certainly better than the past 2 comics and it gets the series back on track. Not bad, Not bad at all.

Benjamin Shehu says

The King doesn't take part in the melee, and Varys gives information to Ned. Lady Stark manages to arrest Tyrion Lannister, while in King's Landing the Cleganes take out pretty much everybody in the tourney.

After reading eight of these last night, I tried to start this one. That was until I decided I'd likely flip my desk if I had to endure much more.

So, sleep I did, and I'm back to read a couple more today. Why? Because it's one of those things: as much as they annoy the shit out of you, you need to finish the series. That's called 'hate-reading' isn't it?

Yeah, well that's where I'm at right now. They aren't particularly great, or maybe I've watched the series too recently to enjoy these, and I feel like I'm doubling up. Either way, the illustrations still look like some 1970s throwback. I did say 1980s earlier, but the 1980s had Masters of the Universe, and that was at least fun.

“Damn you, Ned Stark. You and Jon Arryn. I loved you both, and you put me on a throne. Look at what kinging has done to me. Gods, too fat for my armor. How did it come to that? I swear to you, I was never so alive as when I was winning the throne, and never so dead as now that I've won it.” - Robert
