While Empowered struggles with a superhero community turned upside down by rampant romance, her mercenary “magical girl” opponent, the Soldier of Love, escalates her fanatical “down with love” campaign to an apocalyptic new level! Meanwhile, Ninjette wisely stays well hydrated with a beer or three! Or four! (Gotta have priorities, folks.)

Not too much happens here. Emp researches stuff, they go to confront the Soldier of Love, too be continued. Still enjoyable to read, but not a lot happens.

Never having read Empowered I stumbled upon this 3 part mini-series while in the comic shop. I feel almost ashamed to admit that I totally picked this series up because of the hotly drawn chicks and because it had not only a lesbian and gay couple but as well as any other kind of couple/group that you can think of with each having super powers or being a completely different being other than human. I'm not trying to say, "Hey we need more of .... in comics" I'm just really happy to see a comic mash up so many different couplings in such a fun, and entertaining none focused on "it" being the major plot of the comic. I mean sure all the coupling is a huge plot twist because it is called Empowered and the Soldier of LOVE after all but I'm just saying that it's refreshing to find a series when they don't make a point to drive the coupling of a lesbian or gay person down your throat, nor does the series turn a blind eye to other couplings as "sinful" or "degrading" or "a phase". I really can't wait to read the rest of this series!!!!
