David Evans says

This is the one about cricket, woodworm, pigeon-keeping and a visit to the dentist that ends up with Jennings trying to keep his name out of the local paper. Vintage late-period Jennings.

Jennings (climbing): Hold the bed steady.

Darbshire: It's bedstead.

Jake Collins says

A Jennings book that stands up well compared to others in the second half of the series, with an amusing sequence of events linked together rather neatly by the presence of Swing-Wing the racing pigeon at Linbury Court.

Highlight: Mr Wilkins attempts in vain to explain to Mr Pemberton-Oaks how the word "JENNINGS" came to be emblazoned on a beam in the attic.

Martyn says

Another enjoyable Jennings book, but not as funny as many of the earlier ones in the series. It's amusing without being hilarious. But it's always fun to see what variety of adventures Jennings and Darbshire manage to get up to.
