Nic Walker, I swear you've brought me to my knees again!! I just ADORE this series. A gazillion of stars, but as it's Goodreads 5 stars and 5 enormous ♥♥♥♥♥ will have to do unfortunately. Absolutely superb!!

Tom and Cooper are two halves of the same whole, I sincerely believe that...the age difference means absolutely nothing, it's a Gen Y and LOVE thing!! Tom has an enemy in this one, someone that would not normally be expected to cause a ruckus, and Coop has a complete perv after him because Tom of course is way too old for Cooper and the perv is young, handsome and filthy rich with Daddy's money. ..but apparently lacking a brain, hehe. Do matters get resolved to my satisfaction...hell yes!! Jennifer rides to Tom's rescue, Tom discourages the perv and goes all caveman to protect his lover AND something happens at the end which put an even bigger grin on my face!! What is it?? Well, I'm sure you can all have a real good guess...and you're probably correct, I can only confirm that chez moi there was Happy Dancing, woot!! Nic, I can't thank you enough for all of these amazing stories. ♥♥♥

Thomas Elkin and Cooper Jones finally have the support of their families, and their love grows stronger every day.

Reading the blurb I was worried a little, but there is no threat that would make them apart.

Yes, they have problems but there is nothing they can't solve. The problems are external, and not within them. Their love is unwavering, and their trust and certainty in each other is unquestionable.

I love to see couples after their happy ending. Of course, I love novels ending with HEA (actually, I hate books with no HEA) but it is much better. It is so great to get more of a wonderful couple, to witness them to settling into their relationship.

Tom is the perfect partner for Cooper: he is supportive and comprehending. Everything he does for Cooper and for their relationship comes natural to him. Maybe not always for the first time, but eventually he knows how to make special moments beautiful and memorable.

Both Tom and Cooper are awesome, and together they are gorgeous!

The title is perfect, just as the titles of the two previous books are, oh, and the architectural references to their relationship – so fitting.

This series was an absolute delight to read. Highly recommended!

What a great ending to this series. Tom and Cooper were definitely made for each other. They complemented each other in every way. I really love N.R. Walker's writing style.

And that's why I so enjoy reading NR Walker : it's so relaxing, comforting, fun and hot. Nice break :-)

Last part of this series – that's a pity. After building their relationship, getting accepted by their families, Thomas, 44, and Cooper, 22, now have to face professional troubles. And they do it with flying colors. Thanks to N.R.Walker for this great read and for coming up with such a hot and sweet (in a very good way) couple

A perfect ending to a perfect series. I adored every word.

4.5 Stars!

Part 3 of a 3 novella series featuring Thomas and Cooper.

Loved the conclusion of Cooper and Tom's story!

Loved the development of their relationship over the three books!

Just perfect!

Thomas and Cooper finally have the support of their families and Cooper is thriving at his new job, despite the long hours it requires.

But now Thomas and Cooper are both faced with challenges at their jobs.

Cooper gets his first new account, only to find that the man in charge wants more than Cooper's architectural skills.

And a partner at the firm tries causing trouble for Thomas.

What can I say, I just loved Thomas and Cooper throughout the whole series. They were perfect together.

I highly recommend this series and I will definitely be checking out other stuff by N.R. Walker.

4.5 “It’s a Gen Y thing” stars

Thomas Elkin is a world renowned architect and he is finally happy since divorcing his wife after struggling with his own sexuality for years. His world is turned upside down when his new intern just happens to be Cooper Jones, a close friend of Tom’s son. Tom and Cooper bond over their love of architecture, but when real feelings start creeping in, Tom fears what could happen. After all, there is a 22 year age gap between them.

Tom’s confidence and control that grows with life experiences meshed with Cooper’s youthful exuberance and tenacity perfectly. Their love never wavered or faltered, and they were stronger together than apart. In other words, they just “fit”.

”We’re like a retrofit project, making the older classic style integrate with the modern.
When everything says we probably shouldn’t gel, we just seem to work.~Cooper

We are are retrofit project You are the perfect retrofit for me~Tom Elements of Retrofit (book 1)

You could say that I popped my age gap cherry with this story. N. R. Walker has most likely, ruined all other age gap books for me, because this one was just about perfect.

4.5 Stars**

"You know what a sense of place is?"

"It's when the place you're in feels like home. Where you're at peace."

"You're my sense of place, Cooper."

This has been a FANTASTIC series!! Tom and Cooper have easily added themselves to my favorite couples list.

In this final installment, Tom and Cooper find themselves at a crossroads professionally. Cooper is dealing with an arrogant and spoiled sleazeball who wants to get in his pants, while Tom finds out that his once friend and mentor is sniffing around trying to find dirt to get Tom fired from the firm.

And in typical Tom and Cooper fashion...they face all their troubles head on....together as a team and united front. I think that's my favorite thing about this series....there is never any doubt about how these men feel about each other and they always have each other's back.

The ending and epilogue were the perfect conclusion to a fantastic series and unforgettable couple. They really found their footing in this book and it brought home that nothing would ever matter more to either man than what they have together. Watching these two evolve and grow has my heart ready to burst with love.

"How did I ever get so lucky?"

"I often ask myself the same question."

However, two things kept me from giving this a full five stars: (1) some British terminology kept popping up from time to time (everyone in this book is American) and (2) the author kept using the term "Lego" instead of "Legos." At first I thought it was a typo, but then I noticed that it was spelled that way every time it was mentioned. I added the "s" in my head, but it kind of became distracting.

But even Legos and wankers can't get in my way when it comes to the massive love I have for this series. Tom and Cooper have burrowed a hole in my heart and have taken up residence. I'll definitely be re-reading these books in the future.

I highly recommend this series for anyone who loves well developed and endearing characters, who handle obstacles and drama like adults and know the meaning of trust and love. My cup truly runneth over with this series.

I've said it before in my review of book 2: Clarity of Lines, I love Thomas Elkin. He MAKES this series for me. And because I have such a deep fondness for him, it feels like a treat to read more story about him...and when that story has him HAPPY and ASSURED of himself? It's delightful.

Sense of Place takes us to what feels like the Promised Land by the end of this series. Through their uncertainties of age difference, family interferences, and now work/professional roadblocks, Thomas and Cooper are...SOLID. They're GOOD. They're TIGHT. And they make SENSE. Gone are any niggles, even in my mind, if they're right for each other. Gone are those "waiting for the other shoe to drop" moments to see what will cause their relationship strife. I read this book, from start to finish, with a huge smile on my face.

Thomas, this confident, successful, kind, HUGE-HEARTED man is the rock for Cooper as he tries to win back his family as well as establish his career. sigh...we should ALL have a Thomas in our lives – unwavering in his love and devotion., understanding and patient. And even Cooper...still young, still kinda frat-boyishly annoying, BUT...I see Thomas rubbing off on him. And he's growing up a bit and thus growing on me. (My favorite Cooper moment of the entire series is when he tells Tom the kind of house he should live in. It showed great maturity and a deep love for the man. And when you love Tom that deeply, then I gotta love you too, Cooper! :))

Honestly, the book is a bit cliché at times (Thomas' work issues were kinda out-of-nowhere and over-the-top), and it was odd that Ryan (Thomas' son) was nowhere to be seen in this book. And I admit, through the course of the series, I've had a love/hate relationship with the editor (my irritation in this book: I don't care if the correct plural of Lego is "Lego"...you would NOT find anyone in NY saying anything other than LEGOS as the plural. Sorry)

But, see...that's the mastery of winning readers over with character development...so many other things can be overlooked!

I will miss Thomas. I'm sad to see the series end though I loved the journey. Maybe we can convince NR Walker to write a Christmas short or something about Thomas & Cooper... wink nudge bribery...

A beautiful and touching ending shared between Thomas and Cooper...just perfect. The couple endured hardship and criticism from those around them...yet they stayed strong and committed all the way. I couldn't have asked for a more sweeter and lovely read.

*"Cooper looked around. "This place?"
I shook my head. "No."
His voice kind of squeaked. "Me?"
I nodded and grinned. "You're my sense of place, Cooper."*

"Et cor domum," I murmured. "Its what you are to me...'heart and home'."

Barbara says

Perfect ... just perfect, the perfect ending for the perfect couple!!!

This couple is amazing; their story is beautiful and sweet, despite all the problems, their love is stronger and overcomes every complication!

For me Tom is just the absolute ideal guy...

Thank you so much for creating this couple, N.R. Walker, I will definitely read more of your books!

4.5 stars for the series

Gorgeous, loved it; there were so many feels. I'm a sucker for happy endings, and this one was glorious. Tom and Cooper are one of my favorite couples.

I'm probably not being objective. But, hell, "It's a Cooper Jones thing."

Reread May 2018

Cooper and Tom are one of my favorite couples. I love the age gap and I love how they work together and are a tight couple even when they have doubts. I'm sure I'll reread this series often.

Originally read February 2018

Tom and Cooper are finding their place. Friends and family are coming around. Life is moving forward for both of them separately as well as together. It's the perfect ending to their beautiful, truly romantic and swoon-worthy story. This is why I read romance. This is what I want..a couple who never wavers no matter what life throws at them. Just beautiful.

"You know what a sense of place is?" Cooper nodded. "It's when the place you're in feels like home. Where you're at peace."

"You're my sense of place, Cooper."

"Et cor domum," "Heart and home."
