It is 1810 somewhere in the chaos of war-ravaged Napoleonic Portugal. Miss Charlotte Everslea, dedicated member of an ancient secretive Guild and skilled paranormal artefacts hunter, is hot on the trail of a madman who has stolen an arcane book with the power to change the course of history. Unfortunately, a reversal of fortune for the British troops has left her trapped behind enemy lines pursued by thieves and kidnappers.

Colonel Maximillian Bladewood is used to giving orders and having them obeyed, both on and off the battlefield. As eldest of the large, untidy Bladewood brood, life has equipped him for most of its vicissitudes, or so he believed. But the petite golden-haired hoyden, to whose accidental intervention he owes his life, challenges both his authority and his sanity.

Their cross-purposed journey is further exasperated by their mutual, undiscussed attraction and an eventual crossroads where one or both of them will need to compromise is looming.

Brenda says

Colonel Maximillian Bladewood had been separated from his men – the French soldier who seemed determined to end his life was suddenly no longer a threat; the young woman in front of him had a shocked and slightly frightened look on her face. That was the day Maximillian met Miss Charlotte Everslea, the woman who was to completely change the life of this tough and resilient soldier.

1810 and the British and French were at war – mixed up in that war were members of an ancient Guild, along with devious and evil criminals, led by a Mr Black, determined to change the course of history. And standing in their way were the Everslea siblings. When it seemed things couldn't get any worse – they did. As Maximillian did his best to keep Charlotte safe, he was also fighting an attraction to the fiery little redhead that shocked him. What would be the outcome of their association? And would Charlotte be able to complete the special and important journey she'd started?

I thoroughly enjoyed The Soldier's Woman by Aussie author Kelly Lyonns (which is book 1 in The Bladewood Legacy) – it's hard to believe it's the author's debut! I loved the two main characters; Maximillian's frustration at the serene yet strong-willed Charlotte was amusing, while Charlotte herself was a complex mixture of depth and softness. A wonderful historical fiction novel, The Soldier's Woman is one I highly recommend – I'm looking forward to book 2 already!

With thanks to NetGalley and Atlas Productions for my digital copy to read and review.

Isabella O'Sullivan says

Hooked from the very first page, I loved this Regency romp, and its lead characters. Charlotte was so sassy and her dialogue was fantastic; Maximillian was wonderfully appropriate, frustrated and gentlemanly. A great read to escape into. Thanks to the publisher for the review copy in exchange for an honest review.

Shelley Nolan says

I had such a fun time reading The Soldier's Woman, loving the interactions between Maximilian and Charlotte. There was action, suspense, romance and even a dash of the supernatural, and I lapped it all up. A fun and exciting read for fans of romance, paranormal and historical books.

Angel Hatfield says

The Soldier's Woman was a cute historical romance with a twist of mysticism to add charm to the book. It takes place during the Napoleonic wars, a time period I haven't read many books on. I really liked the flow of the book and the characters. I look forward to reading more from this author.

I took a sidetrack from reading Viridian to Soldier's Woman by Kelly Lyonns. It's sort of a paranormal adventure story set sometime during the Peninsula War; it involves a young woman hunting a magic book and an evil villain, and a British soldier who rescues her. The characters are believable (the heroine is sensible and the hero is heroic), and the action is exciting and non-stop. It is the first in what is to be a series about the Bladewoods, the hero's siblings. Good debut novel, but it needs a lot of copy editing.
