One of my few Deux books!

Debbie Benson says

Soji loves Yusuke but doesn't tell him and instead marries a woman which doesn't work out. Masahito loves Yusuke as well. All three grew up together. Soji and Masahito finally confess their feelings to Yusuke. Yusuke confesses his feelings to Soji. In the end, Yusuke realizes he wants both of them as well.

I read it like 3 or 4 years ago and it was very very fun. The characters were interesting enough for me to forgot about the rest of the world happening around me.

Yaoi lovers should have read this at least once. Or thrice. For me, 10 times or more

3.5 stars

I quit smoking a while ago. In this manga the characters are making a lot of cigarette breaks at work... that was not easy to read... I really wanted a smoke... I guess I'm not really over cigarettes by now ... can they not make chocolate breaks? ;-)

First of all, having the smoking corner (or smoking at all) play such a big role in the story is a turn off for me. Besides that, the story is Yamato attempting to do a more "adult" story, and seeing how it's the cute and funny parts of her manga I like best, I didn't enjoy this one nearly as much as her other works. Plus it was a triangle, so...no fun all around, pretty much. I do like the ending, and there are a couple good moments, so not totally worthless, but...yeah.

Well, I'm happily working my way through the BL section of our store.. so far without guidance, but that will change as of Tuesday, because it turns out an intern actually reads a lot of these and she'll give me some that are worth reading. Anyway - I picked this one because it's the same author who wrote "Ein Lehrer zum Verlieben", so I figured I might as well give it a try.

It was nowhere near as fun as the other one - way too much drama, and it showed me once again that I'm just not a big fan of love triangles. Which is always good to know. (I suppose a love triangle can work if one part of it is an absolute idiot because then I won't feel bad for him or her. But then it's not a real love triangle either because it's fairly obvious who the main character has to end up with (with the party who isn't an idiot). Yes, this is totally worth thinking about.

There were some things I liked about this manga (a happy ending) and some things I disliked (rape). The art is pretty decent but overall the plot wasn't one of my favorites. Two men who have been friends since childhood have had long-time crushes on each other, but never confessed. One of them gets married to try and put his real feelings aside, but that just makes them both more miserable. Meanwhile, another man has also secretly been interested in the single one since childhood. He's my least favorite character. He keeps trying to goad his crush into confessing to their married friend and threatens that if he doesn't, he'll rape him...which he does. His whole point in being in the manga was to force the other two men to confess their feelings for each other but it doesn't make any sense. It would have been a better story if a random rapist hadn't been in it.
