Granny has a new addition to her arsenal of crime fighting weapons as Fuchsia, Minnesota's most colorful detective. Now, along with her famous crook-hooking umbrella, she's acquired a scoundrel-skewering knitting needle. And just in time! Residents of Fuchsia seem to be dropping dead like flies! First, it's Granny's neighbor Sally (who gives up the ghost in her weed-filled front yard), followed by Esmeralda Periwinkle (the squirrel lover on Main Street), and then, Mr. Nail, owner of the local hardware store (who is squashed when dozens of bags of fertilizer fall on top of him). Granny is baffled. Who is behind this murder spree?

Granny enlists the help of her sort of boyfriend franklin Gatsby, the town's police chief Cornelius Stricknine (or "The Big Guy"), her reality-show loving neighbor Mavis, and her own son Thor. And, of course, the special assistance of her menagerie of pets -- including Mr. Bleaty, the goat. Soon Granny is hot on the trail of this dastardly murderer. Unfortunately, when Granny herself is poisoned, everyone insists that she cool her crime solving ways and stay indoors and out of harms way. Of course, that's never going to happen! Not when Granny knows all the secret passageways and tunnels that run underneath Fuchsia. Out she goes--and watch out, you evil doers! Granny will solve this mystery--you can bet your pink undies, she will!

Granny is ahoot

I enjoy the antics of granny as she solves murders and catches shoplifters working undercover for the merchants. Granny is a bit forgetful at times. But she able to do more than people expect.

I love Granny! (Do you think she'll adopt me?)

Like most cozy heroines, Granny just seems to attract trouble. Maybe she lived a quieter, younger life, though, and now has to squeeze all that crazy into the years she has left. Last evening she foiled kidnappers and burglars, with the help of her menagerie. This morning, she goes (in nightgown) to check on her neighbor, whose grass has grown too high. (But with a name like Hermione Vidalia Criony, you just know she was not going to have a quiet life anyway.)

She doesn't take guff from the local law boys either, telling them to their faces that she helps them keep their little town of Fuchsia, Minnesota, safe. And Granny is just one of the colorful characters in this most colorful of towns. I was laughing out loud just reading the names: Chief Stricknine, Mr. Bleaty (a goat), Mrs. Periwinkle and their brother and sister citizens and furry denizens. (If the board game "Clue" is looking to franchise, they should check into Fuchsia. Seriously. "So-and-so" in the garden with the (insert miscellaneous weapon). Priceless.)

I don't do spoilers. If you've been here before, you know that. In this case it would be a crime to tell you how everything turns out. Far be it from me to deny anyone the pleasure of reading how "Granny Skewers a Scoundrel".

(Disclosure: I received an e-copy of this book in exchange for my unbiased review.)

Well Guys and Dolls,

That rascal of a gal is back and finding herself in the middle of mischief, murder, and mayhem! With her curious nature Granny otherwise known as Hermiony Vidalia Criony Fiddlestat can't seem to stay away from trouble and her kids are considering sending her to the "wrinkle farm". Of course this spunky and bright lady will not give up! She is however in for a few surprises when confusion, chaos and crime are on the books.

Granny is a super-sleuth who will solve the mystery, have her cake (or doughnut) and eat it too, all while dressing in her own fashionista style! Those sparkly running shoes and her secret stash of sexy Granny wear makes for a fun, suspenseful and energetic read. Here's to Julie Seedorf with her wonderful imagination and playful sense of humor!

Yours truly can hardly imagine what will happen to Granny next, but I'm sure Julie knows. I'll be waiting like Granny with a glass of wine in hand for a toast!

Granny Skewers a Scoundrel by Julie Seedorf opens the day after the conclusion of Granny Hooks a Crook, in which Granny tied up a criminal conspiracy. The day begins with Granny's discovering her neighbor Sally dead on her front lawn, with just enough life to tell Granny that the grass has stopped talking to her. Worried about her safety, especially after never having heard about Granny's job as security agent to catch all the shoplifters in her hometown of Fuchsia, MN, Granny's two daughters and son are ready to make her either move in with one of her daughters or move to the wrinkle farm. So to keep them at bay, Granny uses her secret passage to get to Franklin Gatsby, and she announces to her children that she wants to introduce them to her fiance, which shocks Franklin as much as her children until he sees the humor in the situation and takes advantage of it with Granny.

Surprise Ending

I enjoyed the second book in this series as much as the first. The author has a vivid imagination and tons of creativity. The characters in this series are so far out that they are almost unbelievable. I was surprised by the way this book ended. I certainly wasn't expecting that person to be the culprit. I am anxious to read the third book in the series.

Have you been inside Granny's mind? It's a strange place. Intriguing, fun, perplexing in a good way, and did I mention fun? In Julie Seedorf's second book featuring Hermiony Vidalia Criony Fiddlestadt (Granny), our leading lady takes it upon herself to solve yet another crime in her beloved town of Fuschia, Minnesota. Now, there are many types of mysteries, 'cozies' being one of them. But add a sub-category here and call it a wild ride with a cool, funny lady. While the crime may be real and could very well happen in your own town, the main character is a combination of 'don't take the elderly for granted,' and 'how about just some light fun reading for a night.' There is enough in this series to hook you in with character, plot and plenty of small town attitude. In this second book, a neighbor's child, Granny's son, Franklin's shocking announcement, and a flurry of fur, all come together to reward us with new insight into Granny's heart. Character names, dialogue style, and Granny's outrageous eating habits (but she sure does know good coffee) set the tone for a comedic spin away from a serious mystery. And that's okay. Because I've grown quite fond of Granny and look forward to Book 3 – and maybe a peek into her past, her memories, and her refrigerator.

It's a really fun book, I liked it so much that I read it in a few hours. We immediately become attached to the eccentric protagonist, his cute animals and other bizarre characters in the story. It's a brilliant novel, compelling, engaging and well-written.

We are in Fuchisia, Minnesota. Granny is a lady who goes undercover for the district to ensure the safety of the city. One evening found her neighbor Sally died, no one knows whether it is due to natural causes or was killed. The children of Granny until worried about her and that she no longer want to wear one. The eccentric mother to keep them quiet invents a boyfriend: is Franklin, a retired cop who has moved to New York City after the death of his wife to live more peacefully.

It's a cozy mystery to be enjoyed from the first to the last page

Which to chose the knitting needle or the umbrella - a girl has to defend herself

Fabulous! Our outrageous granny is back - don't we all wish that we could be as outrageous and outspoken as her. Who is killing the residents? Will granny survive to out the killer? Absolutely terrific read with some great scenes. If you like fun in your cozies then this is definitely for you!

Sandra Holladay says

What a fun read! Granny, as usual, is quite the character. Although I thought I knew who the bad guy was, I didn't get it figured out all the way and the ending came as a bit of a surprise to me. Of course the story is silly and at times ridiculous, that is the charm of Granny. I don't think I would accept it in any other book, but it suits just fine in Fuchsia, Minnesota.

I love spunky Granny! She can really get herself into a fix sometimes but she always gets her man. And what a great idea to foil thieves----an undercover granny!
