Once again admiring Gon's dedication.

Also, I was totally in awe of Biscuit's true form :D (It's sad to see her go)

With the end of the Greed Island arc, we move onto (in my opinion) the best arc created by Yoshihiro Togashi, the Chimera Ant arc.

Gensuru's fight with Gon seemed slightly less action-packed than in the anime, but I still enjoyed it. I mean, we get to see how truthfully reckless Gon is as he is willing to sacrifice his own arm just to get a hit on the enemy. Hisoka has done similar things previously, in fact he sacrificed both his arms just to put on a show, but seeing Gon do it certainly seems different.

On another note, I'm so excited for this new arc. Ever since I first read/watched it, it has held a special place in my heart. After all, no story ever has made me as emotional as this one has. I'm glad we get to see Gon and Killua's potential as well as see them from Kaito's point of view, for he certainly has known Gon for a long time and can see just how quickly and greatly he is improving and growing.

The final battles are raging on Greed Island, and when the dust settles, Gon will face his greatest challenge yet - a pop quiz! Togashi gives our heroes a real run for their money with this exciting entry to the "Hunter X Hunter" series. Even with limbs flying and enemies closing in, Gon and his friends are preparing for the end of their Greed Island adventure!

BOSS BATTLE! For a Shounen manga, there haven't been too many one-on-one fights with our heroes vs Big Bads. Kurapika in the Yorknew City arc was probably the only one so far. Gon finally gets in on the action and... oof. This was a dense volume:

- It's mentioned by someone after the battle, but it's apparent Gon stands very little chance against Bomber, but only if you're basing them off power and experience. Bomber is pretty legit for an underdeveloped villain - he quickly identifies Gon's strategy and counters with his own, taking full control of the battle. He also catches on that Gon will not go down physically - his spirit must be broken. However, as Bomber will soon realize, this is not a battle of strength at all.

- Meanwhile, Bisky reveals her "monster" form to crony No. 1, while Killua reveals his cool new weapon against crony No. 2.

- Back to the boss battle: In flashbacks, you see how comprehensive Gon's training truly was, which is why this chess match is so entertaining. But Gon, ever the masochist, decides to put his pride before his own preservation and gets in a couple decent hits at the expense of getting his arm blown the !#$& off. Then everything just goes bonkers. The heroes' full plan comes into fruition and you can enjoy the carnage that follows. But seeing a child with an arm blown off fight a grown man with bombs for hands is not the most settling of images.

- Despite all that just happened, everything is resolved with overwhelming heart and kindness. And, as I've mentioned before, Goreinu is a stand-up dude. Respect.

- As the entire arc has teased, the exorcist is off to free the chains on Chrollo. The heartthrob will be back... someday!

- Hey, look, someone finally beat Greed Island! You learn some history about the game and how Gon's dad is a prick of the first order. In trying to get to Ging, Gon and Killua are instead sent to Kite, Ging's student who we met all the way back in the first issue. After playing some real-life Pokemon Snap, our heroes stumble upon an emerging new threat: Chimera Ants.

Enjoy the reprieve, because we're about to embark on some truly dark territory.

Story: 5/5
Art: 4/5

The trio split up with their respective Bomber enemy. Biscuit and Killua defeat their opponents (Biscuit reveals her true form). Gon gets hit repeatedly according to a plan. Their plan succeeds and they capture the Bomb Devils.

They collect all the cards from the Devils which triggers an event for the #000 card--a multiple choice quiz open to all the players. The highest scorer will receive the card.

That was pretty funny, in the end, to have a multiple choice quiz. The trio complete the game and Gon meets more of his father's friends. Greed Island was a fun arc to follow, and is probably my second favorite after the Hunter Exam arc.

EDIT: I finally got my hands on my own copy for £40 and I regret nothing, because HxH is that good. Also, the art quality is a lot better in the tankoubon!

I... am heading into the unknown. To put it bluntly I'm freaking terrified of what the Chimera Ant arc's going to do to my feelings. This is the girl who was hyperventilating at Gon and Killua playing dodgeball in the last volume.

I guess I'm going to have to mention the significant drop in art quality here. I heard he redrew the messy pages in the tankoubon, but since I don't have access to one right now I can't check. It is kind of annoying and surprising that it got published, but if it was to meet deadlines I guess it's fine. Still, what are you doing, Togashi?

I can't say that Gensuru's fight with Gon had as much of an impact on me as it did in the anime. At the time I was sat there with one hand over my mouth, muttering at the screen. It was more epic than Hanzo-level uncomfortable, though, seriously, Gon should stop being so reckless. Killua's fight was also awesome, but... Biske, you're still not explained! Why?! I can't comprehend this why--

I confess I started freaking out the second I saw an ant. This arc is going to kill me.

Scared, but... excited. It's been a long time since HxH has surprised me. I'm looking forward to it.

We have made it to the end of the Greed Island arc with an action packed last volume here. Basically, it's Gon, Killua and Biscuit just being awesome (and Biscuit in her amazing true form). The Bomber has been beaten and Gon wins the game and gets the ending Ging wanted for him. He takes three cards out of the game, one of them being accompany, and tries to locate Ging with it...only to be thwarted again! Instead of Ging, we get one of my the best characters, Kite. With that, we are led into my favorite arc of the entire series, The Chimera Ant Arc, and I can't wait for it to start. Wonderful volume.
