Neighborly Deception Carol Gambill

When Cat Lamarck moves into the neighborhood, she quickly discovers her neighbor has more attitude than a protective grizzly bear over a cub. Rude and arrogance just tops his list while first impressions warn her to stay on her side of the property line. However, fate has a crazy way of bending and manipulating its magic whenever least expected, and most times piling on more complication. Now suspecting the worst after what she's heard, Cat is torn after his daughter's frequent visits that will force her to undertake the next to impossible, and give her neighbor a chance to prove that he isn't the person everyone suspects him to be.

Carol Gambill says

In your neighborhood.

Watching, even spying on a neighbor.

Chances are everyone has done it at one time or another, but for Cat and Mikey things get personal and lines are crossed. Do they avoid one another and stay strangers, or will they eventually view each other in another light?
