This Just in Kerry Blair

“I never thought anybody would hear these words from me, but there are times when fashion doesn’t count.”

When a presidential candidate’s young son disappears into the Arizona desert, TV fluff reporter Jillanne Caldwell gets her first chance at a real news story. But the former beauty queen will soon be forced to face her worst nightmares—and perhaps realize her biggest dreams—in her own hilarious way. Accompanying Jill on the race to save her favorite Sunbeam is Clay Eskiminzin, a seasoned tracker who dislikes reporters because of a secret of his own. Clay knows he can find Connor, but can only hope to find him alive. Thus the unlikely pair begins a desperate search in a vast, unforgiving desert wilderness where they must battle against the evils of men as well as the unrelenting forces of nature if they hope to save an innocent child.

I read this on a train and other passengers were constantly looking at me as I burst out in uncontrollable laughter.

Melissa says

This was a surprisingly good book. I enjoyed learning a lot about the Arizona desert and survival. The highlight for me was when the book started talking about one of my ancestors. It was a shock, but nice to see. I even learned some new, interesting info about him. Who knew my family hob nobbed with the 19th pres. of the Untied States. So much so that one of the Presidents son's was named after him. George Crook. I thought it was great!

Jenny says

Unique main character makes this book a bit non-traditional and quirky. Kind of fun...

Alisa says

Jillanne Caldwell, an obsessed beauty queen and fluffy reporter, finds herself as part of a two-person search team looking for her favorite Sunbeam, Connor. Connor is the son of an aspiring politician, and of Jillanne's former best friend. Jillanne is teamed up with Clay, an experienced tracker who has been hired to find Connor. I thought it was a fun book to read - as Jillanne and Clay get to know each other they find out they are more alike than different - at least in the ways that really matter.

I loved this book. At first the main character, Jill, irritated me. I thought she was way blonde. But, the more I read the book, the more I loved this quirky character. I loved watching her overcome fears and fall in love with "bat guy" Clay - a character too wonderful for words. There is so many wonderful things in this book (like beauty tips. hehehehehehe)

Adelle says

Hilarious! Kerry Blair is an author that keeps me laughing! My daughter loves this book for the same reason!

Rebecca Dean says

Loved this story - exciting plot twists and getting to know the characters was so much fun. I loved the Jillanne Caldwell "beauty-queen, reporter" character and of course, the future love interest "Clay" the tracker from Arizona.

The attempt at rescuing the young boy if intriguing and a great plot, well-written

Add survival in the desert mountains to a typical "opposites attract" romance line and you've got Blair's novel, "This Just In."

Jillane is pretty, and perhaps a bit shallow, two facts which count against her in the world of journalism. She's also a Primary teacher. When one of her little Sunbeams disappears, the son of a presidential candidate no-less, she knows she just has to get the story. She doesn't count on handsome, [quiet], legendary tracker Clay, nor does she count on having to survive in the Arizona desert with him. But Connor's disappearance is more than just accidental, and whoever has him does not want to be found.

Hilary Roberts says

This author has a very unique writing style. Not the kind of book you where you can ever get totally into the action because the humor keeps things really light. I kind of enjoyed it, though, for something a little different. The romantic relationship development was interesting at first but written well enough that it didn't bother me at all in the end. If you want some light and different, yet fun, LDS mystery/romance then this is your book.

Shayne says

Kerry outdid herself on this one. Jillanne was perfect! For anyone who ever thought they were nothing but a pretty face and then had someone show them how much more they truly were, not to mention encouraging them to dig deep within and discover more, this book is for them. Jillanne is lovable from start to finish!

Gaelynn says

I did like this book, but parts of it were just a little "too" for me.... Jill was too "fluffy", Clay was too "good", too much happened in too short of time, other characters were too shallow. Having said that, it is a good clean read, action packed and a fun escape. I did appreciate the humor and the stream of consciousness writing style.

Darla says

(Genre:LDS fiction/adventure suspense/humor/romance) I loved this book! I thought it was so funny, that when I was done reading it, I read it out loud to my husband. The main character, Jillanne, is an absolute riot for me. Jillanne is a morning TV reporter for "What's up Tuscan?". She was a first runner up Miss America and is supposedly your typical blonde airhead. But when her favorite Sunbeam (yep, she is a primary teacher) is lost in the desert of Arizona, she is sure that the Lord wants her out looking for him. She manages to tag along with Clay, a very handsome, single, temple worthy, capable search and rescue ranger. Soon it becomes apparent that this is not just a simple case of a child wandering off into the desert and both Jill and Clay are trying to stay alive while they follow the clues in their search for 4 year old Conner. I really enjoyed the humor of the story and Kerry Blair does a great job in describing the desert environment. And I really liked the heroine that shows she has more depth than people (including herself) give her credit for. 4 1/2 stars!

Savanna says

Jillanne Caldwell is a TV reporter and Connor Teagler's Primary Teacher. When he goes missing in the desert Jill makes sure she is assigned to the story. She teams up with Clay Eskiminzin, an Indian tracker, to search for Connor. Clay promises to find Connor but won't promise to find him alive. Jill will need to face the worst the desert can throw at her if she wants to find her best friend's son alive.

This book is great! Jill is silly and a drama queen; but she has a good heart. I love the humor of the story and the fact that Clay puts up with her just about makes him a saint in my eyes. (I wish he was mine!) In case you don't already know, this is an LDS fiction novel. So if you are a girl and love LDS fic. this is the book for you.

Kelli Blake says

4.5... it was a fun easy read

Susan says

What I really like about Jillanne Caldwell is how humorously brave she is. She is such a "girly girl", you can feel her hyperventilating at each perilous and squeemish moment. What really made me laugh were her beauty tips included with her narrative. It made her even more likable. Clay Eskiminzin is better than Batman! I kept picturing the movie "Charade". Jill wants to find out who Clay really is just like Audrey Hepburn wants to know who Cary Grant really is (mysterious and amazing). I loved their prayers, scriptures, and the difference between what is "real life" and "reel life." I really like to watch movies too.
