booklady says

A good friend gave me this for Christmas. The plan was to do a different version of the Way of the Cross each Friday of Lent with a view to deepening my love for, and experience of, this traditional devotion. My husband and I used to enjoy going to our parish 'Stations' during Lent, especially with our children growing up, but now we have to be content to do so at home. I had never read these by the dear Venerable Fulton Sheen and was prepared to love them anyway, yet surprised to also be catechized by them! We are never finished learning about our faith!

So ... the Three Falls of Our Lord correspond to the Three Temptations: the World, the Flesh and the Devil and the three Persons under the Cross represent all of Humanity: Innocence (the Blessed Mother), Sinners (Magdalene) and Priests (John).

There is much more as well. As I want to do all the other versions of the Stations this Lent, I hope I haven't done the best first, thus rendering the others to pale in comparison. Well if so, then back to this. The prayers are so beautiful. Sublime simplicity. Fully five stars+.
